Source: Myanmar Alinn

The country can earn more dollars swiftly by selling condominium apartments according to the Condominium Law at a time when there is a scarcity of dollars in the country, said U Shein Win, President of Myanmar Construction Entrepreneurs Association (MCEA) at a talk on the Condominium Law, at Pan Pacific Hotel in Yangon on August 26. The government will get exact data and tax revenues as condo apartments are sold with official stamps and registration. Condo apartments are the only remedy to a shortage of dollars quickly. The Condominium Law is a special law for the construction sector which can help the condominium market by reducing special stamp taxes and special income taxes.

The Condominium Law was passed with the Union Parliament Law No.24, on January 29, 2016. On December, 7, 2017, the Construction Ministry issued a notification No.267/2017. The Union parliament approved the amendments to the bylaws on August 24, 2018.

CBM's loan disbursement to private banks would result in inflation JPAC

Source: Weekly Eleven

In 2016-2017 FY, the Central Bank of Myanmar (CBM) loaned over Ks-693 billion to seven private banks at the request of local banks. This may increase the amounts of revolving money and lead to inflation, the Joint Public Account Committee (JPAC) suggests. In 2016-2017 FY, the CBM granted temporary loans to seven private banks with the term not exceeding 92 days. The CBM calculated the daily interest rate with a 10-per-cent interest.

Union Auditor-General U Maw Than said the disbursement of temporary loans to private banks can help support the circulation of money. Ayeyarwady Bank stood first with a loan of Ks-225 billion, Myanmar Apex Bank, second, with over Ks-179 billion and Kanbawza Bank, third with Ks-130 billion. Granting temporary loans to private banks can help smooth the circulation of money in private banks and the CBM get interest incomes, the Joint Public Account Committee has warned.

PMI falls to series low in August

Source: IHS Markit

Operating conditions across Myanmar’s manufacturing sector deteriorated to the greatest extent in the series history in August. The overall performance was hampered by strong falls in output and new orders. “Despite weak demand conditions, firms raised their output prices steeply. A sharp fall in the value of the kyat over the last couple of months has pushed up the costs of imported goods, reflected in a marked rise in input prices. Higher charges reportedly stemmed from strain on profit margins following the fastest rise in costs since the survey began in December 2015. On a more positive note, goods producers were more buoyant in their optimism towards future output. Subsequently, business confidence reached a nine-month high following muted sentiment in recent months.

Key points:

- Manufacturing operating conditions deteriorate for second month running
- Output and new orders contract at faster rates
- Inflationary pressures intensify

Air Mandalay shuts down amid overcapacity

Source : Myanmar Times

The fourth domestic airline has wind up as aviation businesses struggle to turn a profit in an industry overcrowded with competitors, amid high fuel price, lacklustre demand and lack of government support.

Air Mandalay, which had been in service for 24 years, has stopped all flight schedules and charter services in order to restructure the whole business, starting from September 4, the airline's spokesperson Daw May Thandar Win told The Myanmar Times yesterday. Air Mandalay is the fourth domestic airline to be suspended after Air Bagan, Apex airline and FMI Air, while six domestic businesses remain.

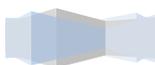

The company stated in a press release that it "has been extremely difficult" to operate in the country and the situation has worsened since 2011, when a number of new airline licenses were approved to operate in the country resulting in too many domestic carriers, oversupply of seats and intense competition, with airlines suffering heavy losses.
