Myanmar launches investment promotion plan amid toughening conditions

Source- Myanmar Times

Re-export sugar licenses with China suspended: Government

Source- Myanmar Times

Issuance of re-export sugar licenses with China have been suspended, according to U Aung Htoo, deputy commerce minister. This recent measure comes in light to solve the problem of currency manipulation. However, he added that it's a temporary decision and will be reconsidered if businesses and foreign currency stabilizes.

In face of this decision, China has stopped buying sugar from Myanmar for a full month. Initially, a bilateral official route trade for rice, sugar and maize was discussed at the end of May, but was cancelled abrupt by the Chinese central government.

Currently, a 20-kilogramme bag of sugar has a price tag of 165 Yuan, which is significantly higher than the previous years. But for some businesses, Ministry of Commerce's suspension for re-export doesn't pose trouble for sugar traders due to the decline of foreign currency and virtually no demand from China.

The re-export licenses issuance started in 2015 to promote local trade volume, but it was suspended for piling up re-export sugar in the local market last year. Experts from the sugar industry point out that re-export licenses shouldn't be issued in the local sugar crushing season. Re-export refined sugar was US$399 million, at the same time, export of local sugar was around US$3.646 million in September 2018, according to the Ministry of Commerce.

The joint agribusiness finance programme aims to facilitate livestock dealers and farmers with working capital to buy animal feed from the Myanmar CP Livestock, which is currently operating four feed mills in Yangon, Taunggyi and Mandalay, with a total capacity of around 750,000 tons per year.

This is Yoma Bank's new innovative financing for the development of local small- and medium-enterprises. With this program, individual farmers and dealers will have access to a formal financial system to grow their livestock businesses.
